Montpelier thinks she may have a "fire bug." Beware of them; they are costly luxuries.

Just because the January drunk record in Barre city was unusually small is no reason why anyone should attempt to break the record.

Northfield doesn't propose to have her honors as the "arbitration town" taken away from her, and the Franco-Venezuelan hearing before Referee Frank Plumley will be held there and not at the State House in Montpelier.

So the Rev. George Washington Morrow has resigned as superintendent of the Vermont Anti-Saloon League. Without Morrow the League will be like "Hamlet" with the leading character left out, so long has he been associated in the capacity of superintendent.

What a slump! The Montpelier board of health has notified the state board of health that it does not care to prosecute the woman who broke the quarantine regulations by removing her son who was suffering with scarlet fever. Apparently the Montpelier health board has waited long enough to find out that there are no cases arising from the occurrence and ascertaining that there are none has decided to let the matter drop. Where is that fine frenzy that was stirred up at the time the woman committed the act? The disposition to have the offender punished for placing so many lives in jeopardy through the infection? Be it said to the credit of the city health officer that he was the only one of the board to vote against the recommendation that she be absolved from punishment. It must be that our quarantine laws are nothing more than so many printed words.

GOOD WORK BY FIRE DEPARTMENT.

To the prompt and efficient work of the Barre fire department may be ascribed the fact that the main building of Goddard seminary is standing today and that it is only damaged in a comparatively slight degree. Such a fire as threatened the immense structure last night would have found the building an easy prey had the flames been allowed to gain much more headway. Once well started in the main building the fire could scarcely have been checked. That the firemen kept the bulk of the flames confined in the annex is much to their credit and that the spread through the partitions was also stopped early is also a matter worthy of commendation. The department, under Chief Campbell, did excellent work. Both the school and the community must feel gratified, as the loss would have been severely felt by both had the building been destroyed.

A MEGAPHONE BALCONY.

Arrangement at a Kansas City Depot For Announcing Trains.

Some time ago the crier of the Union depot at Kansas City, Mo., complained that he could not fight his way through the crowds that throng the old shack, says the Kansas City Star. Under the former arrangement he walked a beat up and down the waiting rooms at intervals bawling out the time of departure and destination of trains about due to leave the depot. Mr. Sanford conceived the idea of building a balcony or quarter deck above the main outlet to the depot platform. Here was installed the "man with a megaphone."

His equipment consisted of a field glass, a gong fixed to the ceiling, the time cards and a monster megaphone. Between trains he pores over the time card, studying the time of departure of the 200 trains that go out of the depot daily. He keeps in touch with the various train masters and has reports from the telegraph office as to the time of arrival of through trains. Seated in a comfortable armchair, he scans the depot platform. Through his field glass he sights Santa Fe No. 5 backing into the depot preliminary to its westward journey. He jumps to his feet, seizes his big megaphone and pulls the bell rope that rings the gong fixed to the ceiling. Having thus attracted attention, he announces three times in different directions, "All aboard Atchafalpa, Topeka and Santa Fe for Holiday, Lawrence, Topeka and points in Colorado, Utah and Texas." In this manner he announces the departure of all of the outgoing trains.

The young man who uses the megaphone has been selected for his big voice and his ability to recite in an even, parrot-like way the announcements. E. J. Sanford, president of the Union Depot company, says that he is convinced that this method is quite the most satisfactory that has been devised. He has announced his decision to the effect that the "man with a megaphone" is a permanent institution.

AN ECLIPSE EXPEDITION.

Indiana Savants to Use a Long Telescope During Solar Event.

An expedition provided by Indiana university will be sent to Spain this year to observe the total solar eclipse of the sun which occurs on Aug. 30, says the Indianapolis News. It will be in charge of John A. Miller, professor of mechanics and chemistry; W. A. Coggeshall, assistant professor in the same lines, and A. F. Kuerstner, another member of the faculty.

They will have a horizontal telescope seventy-five feet long, providing an aperture of eight inches. This, with one exception, will be the longest and most powerful photographic telescope ever used during a total eclipse.

Professor Miller and his assistants hope to be able to get a good photograph of the smaller planet which, it is believed by astronomers, exists and travels about the sun in a smaller orbit than any known planet.
